

Why are the new outlet pressures different?

Different saved downstream paths produce different pressures at the ROI cuts.
O3 is itself a model terminal: its real-cut pressure is defined as zero; no downstream geometric R3 is invented.

All pressures are model gauge pressures, not measured physiological mouse pressures.